Creative Brief

Jack Warren

Project Title: iPod Website

Wikipedia link: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/IPod

- Project overview – The goal of my website is to be informational about everything about iPods. I will use the general iPod Wiki page but I will also use some of the related pages to cover everything (like iPod Advertising wiki page).
- Resources - I put the link at the top of the page, and as mentioned previously, I will be using this wiki page too: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/IPod_advertising. There will be many photos and videos archived online, as well as my iPod to take photos of.
- Audience - The audience is basically just iPod enthusiasts, but also just people who are curious. I want to make sure that anyone can learn something new with this website. I may also want to target people ditching modern day streaming services to use MP3 players again, as this is something I have been passionate about for 2ish years.
- Message - Like I just mentioned, the underlying message will be about the importance of owning media and using MP3 players instead of paying for streaming. Again, I also want to stress that it will also just be an informational website for people who are in/want to get into this community.
- Tone - I think that the tone will be nostalgic and fun. This is not a very serious topic by any means, so I think it will allow me to have an optimistic angle.
- Visual Style - It will definitely lean into the “Y2K” feeling of iPods, however I don’t think it would be wise for me to 1 to 1 replicate an old website, as they generally do not age well. Instead, I would like to take elements of skewomorphism (idk how to spell it haha) and work with them in a modern setting. It could also be fun to have a controllable virtual ipod that is in charge of the navigation (like using the scroll wheel to navigate to each subpage)

